The Hatch Bill, Revived, to Pass

The amended Hatch bill, once apparently killed in the current session of congress, was passed by the house Wednesday — now goes to the senate for action on house changes, and is virtually certain of final enactment this week. We note that the Arkansas delegation in the lower house split on the Hatch bill vote — not a surprising fact, because there is on honest doubt as to how this ban on political activity will actually work. But the spirit behind the Hatch legislation deserves a practical test, and it is going to get it.

The original Hatch bill prohibited federal employees in routine tasks from being used by their superiors for campaign purposes.

This second Hatch bill, now approaching final enactment, aims to do for state employees who are paid in part out of federal funds just what has already been done for federal workers.

If you are a realist, as opposed to an idealist, you scarcely expect any enactment to change the nature of politics.

The art of politics is the right hand of any self-governing nation.

But as our country grows older the character of its government changes, and this is a natural thing. We have permanently expanded the payroll of government—and today millions more work for federal and state governments than formerly.

But most of the work that these new employees do is supposedly of a non-political character. Private citizens have the right to demand that the state aims of these many new jobs be observed during campaign years as well as other years.

Your correspondent believes not only the Hatch legislation but civil service bespeak the new order of the day.

For government, having gone more and more into business, must drop at least part of its political practices and comply with private business procedure.

Twenty-seven boys exhibited club calves at the first County Dairy Club exhibit at Blevins Wednesday. Paul Carruth, extension dairyman, who classified the calves, said there was more action on the part of the boys and more desirable calves as a group than he had ever had the pleasure of working with previously.

The dairy calf show was sponsored by the Hempstead county 4-H club and Blevins FFA with the cooperation of the Hempstead county Farm Bureau. Oliver L. Adams, county agent, and L. J. Brown, Smith-Hughes instructor at Blevins directed the show.

Lee H. Garland, secretary of the Hempstead county Farm Bureau, awarded the premiums and discussed the value of quality 4-H club projects with the group. More than 125 persons viewed the exhibit even though it was the second day farmers had had weather suitable for field work in the past few weeks.

In the first group of good class of calves exhibited, four boys had calves which qualified and were awarded $5.00 each in cash by the Hempstead county Farm Bureau. These boys were Glen Brown, Blevins Senior 4-H club, Carroll Allen Jr., Washington 4-H club, William Roy Zumwalt, Blevins Junior 4-H club and Walter Brooks, Blevins Junior 4-H club. Robert Foster, of Blevins FFA was awarded $1.00 by the Hempstead county 4-H club council as a champion showmanship award. Gilbert Honea of Blevins Junior 4-H club was awarded second place in the showmanship award.

Boys having a fair class of calves and awarded $2.50 each included: Gilbert Honea, J. C. Smith, Billie Baker, Thomas Ward, Raymond Honea, Robert Shackelford, Arthur Taylor, Walter Edwards, Elvin Brooks, J. B. Bailey, Charles Crawford, Harris Cummings and Cny McKinnon Jr. Boys awarded $1 each for third rate calves were: Robert Foster, Percy Honea, Halton Reeves, Ralph Phillips, Truman Arrington, Charles Baker, J. T. Still, Wallace Wood, Eugene Urey and Doyle Yates.

In a dairy heifer scoring contest supervised by Herman Stoy, local jersey breeder, J. C. Smith of Blevins was awarded a free trip to the State 4-H club camp at Fayetteville during the week of July 20th. This trip to the 4-H club camp was sponsored and financed by the Hempstead county 4-H club council.

Chicago's Mayor Kelly Demands That Roosevelt Run

SEN. MILLER ALSO

Arkansas Senator Endorses President for a Third Term

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Renomination of President Roosevelt to a third term was demanded Thursday by 64 members of the house, who signed a statement setting forth their position.

Signing of the statement became known as speculation over the manner in which Roosevelt would announce his intentions grew even more intense than discussion over what his intentions are.

Kelly Favors 3rd Term

CHICAGO—(AP)—The question of President Roosevelt's third term plans dominated Democratic pre-convention conversation Wednesday. A majority predicted he would be a candidate.

Two state leaders, Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and Frank McFale of Indiana, believed the president would run again. Kelly had just returned from a White House visit.

"Anyone nominated in times like these has got to accept the nomination whether he wants it or not," the mayor asserted.

Kelly believed Postmaster General Farley would continue as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Farley replied that his "situation was unchanged." The chairman is a foe of the third term and a candidate. His associates have said he would withdraw if Mr. Roosevelt accepts the renomination.

Miller for 3rd Term

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Miller (Dem. Ark.) Wednesday endorsed President Roosevelt for renomination. Never strictly a "New Dealer," but a supporter of many administration objectives, Miller declared:

"In view of existing (European) conditions, I feel that the president should disregard tradition and precedent and accept the nomination at the hands of the Democratic convention. If the president accepts the nomination I feel absolutely sure of Democratic success in November."

Knox Is Confirmed at Head of Navy

Vote is 66 to 16 for Republican in the Cabinet

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate approved the nomination of Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice president nominee in 1936, to be secretary of the navy Wednesday. The vote was 66 to 16.

Confirmation came after Knox's views on foreign affairs had been described by Senator Holt (Dem. W. Va.) as those of an interventionist. The appointment was defended by Senator Lucas (Dem. Ill.).

"I know Colonel Knox is against the Democratic party," Lucas said in urging.

Hatch Bill Passes the Lower House

Bars U. S.-Paid State Employees From Politics

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Hatch bill to curb political activity by certain state employees and limit campaign contributions and expenditures was passed, 243 to 122, by the house Wednesday.

Endorsed by President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, it will impose these restrictions, among others, upon the following categories:

1. State and local employees whose salaries come wholly or in part from federal appropriations (highway department workers, agricultural agents and many others) will be subject to the same prohibitions which the original Hatch act imposes upon full-fledged federal employees.

2. Individual political contributions will be limited to $5,000. Firms which receive any remuneration from federal contracts may not contribute at all.

3. The political parties may spend no more than $2,000,000 on their campaigns. (In 1936 the Republicans reported an outlay of $8,000,000 and the Democrats $5,000,000.)

The measure, passed by the senate March 19, returns there for action on house changes. Legislative action may be completed Thursday and the bill sent to President Roosevelt.

The vote included: Democrats for: Gathings, Ark.; Terry, Ark.

Democrats against: Cravens, Ark.; Kitchens, Ark.; Mills, Ark.; Norrell, Ark.

Disclosure Made Two Weeks After Convention's Close

HARRISBURG, Pa.—(AP)—An attaché at Governor Arthur H. James' office said Thursday he had been informed a bomb planted near the scene of the Republican national convention had been intended "for the governor."

Two Bombs Found

NEW YORK—(AP)—Two powerful dynamite bombs were found near the convention hall during the Republican national convention in Philadelphia two weeks ago, it was learned from a high police authority Thursday after Police Commissioner Lewis Valentine disclosed that a number of bombs were found during the meeting.

Valentine did not say how many bombs were found nor where they were discovered, but other sources said seven or eight were located, some of them in a hall frequently used for Communist meetings.

Valentine made the disclosure in a talk to detective force in which he asserted the bomb explosion at the World's Fair July Fourth which killed two detectives "is just the beginning."

'Big Government' Threat as Bad as 'Big Business' One

Farming, Business, Industry, Have Made U. S. Great

NOT GOVERNMENT

This Is Philosophy of the Republican Nominee

Last of six stories on the life of Wendell Willkie.

By TOM WOLF

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Wendell Willkie left the Democratic party not because he had fought with the administration over its utility policies. There was a bigger issue in his mind. He has often said: "It is the common purpose of all liberals to make men free." And he believes Big Government, like the Big Business he fought as a La Follette liberal, tends to fetter rather than free mankind.

To Willkie, the campaign issue is basically very simple: "Farming, business and industry have made this country great . . . not government."

"It will be a strain for a man who was all but unknown four months ago to carry his ideas to the nation in four months more. But Wendell Willkie feels up to it. His life has often been hectic.

Never Owned a Car

There is no such thing as a typical Willkie day. If he has worked late, pretty, fluffy-haired "Billy" Willkie won't let any one call her husband until he wakes of his own accord.

Until a few years ago she bought him cuff links by the dozen. Then she gave up and had them sewed into his size 17 shirts. Even under her eagle eye, it's a 50-50 bet that he'll leave his comfortable, eight-room apartment on Manhattan's upper Fifth avenue without any money.

He has never owned a car. ("I'm afraid I'd run into a telegraph pole, while I was thinking of something else.")

In place of the spacious, neat office of the usual billion-dollar-corporation president, Willkie has worked in a small room, practically underground, save for a huge painting of a family admiring some electrical appliances. (Wendell Willkie, first, last, and always, is a salesman.) His desk is a litter of papers, letters, books, cigarettes (he smokes two packs a day), and ashes.

A typical Willkie pose finds his feet on the desk (dubiously comfortable for a man with corns), his mouth in the phone, his hands gesticulating emphatically. Possibly he is dictating at the same time. He has a phenomenal memory, and one of those rare, compartmentalized minds which can follow three different jobs at once.

But if Willkie is concentrating on any one thing, and becomes engrossed in it, he would not hear you tell him his clothes were on fire.

No Routine in His Life

Willkie writes all his own speeches. While he dictates, he gestures to Fred Rahter, his secretary, as he intends to gesture to his audience—noting by Rahter's reaction whether or not the point is well made. When he actually makes the speech, his vigor leaves him wringing wet.

Whenever he has time, he'll duck out of a couple of days to one of the five corn and hog farms which he runs ("at a small profit") near Rushville, Ind.

Before the campaign began, Wendell usually found Wendell Willkie home with his wife, his 20-year-old only child, Phillip, and his books. But there was never any routine about it.

"I won't be dropped into a mold," he recently told an interviewer. "I want to be a free spirit. If I wasn't one, I would still be sitting on a cracker box in Indiana."

The story of Wendell Willkie is the story of a free spirit.

Tobacco was first planted by colonists in Virginia in 1612.

He summarizes:

The union demanded a closed shop clause in the union's old contract which expired July 1 after being in operation 4 and a half years.

Picket lines were thrown about both Malvern plants. Company officials said they would not attempt to operate the plants but would keep night watchmen and office workers employed.

Nazis Blast Isle Coast to Coast, But Lose Eight Planes

Few Deaths Reported Among the Defending British

HEAVY SUB TOLL

Germany Claims 609,000 Tons of Shipping Sunk

LONDON—(AP)—Germany's bombers, in unrelenting raids, blasted England from coast to coast with bombs Thursday, and turned machine guns on civilians in the streets, but England's defense took a steady toll.

The government reported "few" deaths.

At least eight German raiders were reported shot down by British fighters.

609,000 Tons Sunk

BERLIN—(AP)—Destruction of British shipping at a rate far in excess of Britain's average losses in the World war's unrestricted, "sink on sight" submarine campaign was reported Thursday by the German high command.

In the six weeks ending July 1, the high command announced, 609,000 registered tons of "enemy commercial shipping" was sunk by submarine action alone.

The Nazis declared their sea campaign is rapidly becoming a starvation blockade of the British Isles.

Nazi claims were a reminder of the early months of 1917 when the United Kingdom had a food supply sufficient for only three weeks.

2 British Ships Hit

ROME—(AP)—Bomb hits on two of the mightiest units of the British fleet—the Battle Cruiser Hood and the Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal—were announced Thursday by the Italian high command, fitting further details into the Italian account of Monday's and Tuesday's battle in the Mediterranean.

The 42,100-ton Hood, world's largest warship, was said by the Italian communiqué to have been set afire, while two heavy bombs fell on the deck of the 22,000-ton Ark Royal.

These Russian circles denounced as "Pure nonsense" the wide-spread fear in Turkey that Moscow is about to ask concessions in the Dardanelles straits or the Caucasus region of Turkey.

Warning of Invasion

LONDON—(AP)—Britain was warned that Nazi invasion may be sprung Thursday, perhaps in the dawn, and speculated as to whether this statement from a war office was the authorized first word that the zero hour for England was near. Members of Parliament studied the "attack" warning in which Sir Edward Grigg, under-secretary of state for war, told Britons Wednesday night:

"Tonight thousands of our soldiers will be on the alert, waiting for an attack which may come in several places at dawn."

He spoke while the thunder of bombs signaled the greatest air fight of the war over England. British planes and coastal guns drove the Germans off late in the day after shooting down or disabling 37 of the raiders.

Acknowledging the loss of two British planes, the Air Ministry reported that it incessant dog-fights 14 German bombers and fighter craft were shot down. Another 23 were reported "so badly damaged that they were unlikely to reach home."

The raiders concentrated on breaking down coast defenses and smashing shipping out of the narrow Straits of Dover. At times at least 150 planes battled simultaneously along the coast, the Germans trying for hits on ships and attempting to break through British defenses for inland attacks.

Unlike raids of weeks ago when bombers came a few at a time without fighter escort, the raiders brought planes to ward off British Spitfires and Hurricanes. One squadron of nine bombers was guarded by 50 lighter warplanes. The bombers were guarded within two full circles of Messerschmitts.

British pilots called the fight "the

Yankees Contend There Are 10 Times as many Ball players Today, but Good Ones Are Scarce, So Champions Hunt Harder and Check Closer

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA-Service Sports Editor
The Yankees aren't out of this year's race, and they haven't stopped trying.

A three-day school at Yankee Stadium attracted 110 youngsters.

Phil Rizzuto, the brilliant Kansas City shortstop, walked into one of these sessions in 1937.

The next semester is scheduled for Newark in the fall, and will be held behind locked gate, as classes have been conducted since rival scouts stole two boys from Prof. Paul Kritcheil's Kansas City college two years ago.

Forty of the 110 who attended the course just concluded will be watched on sandlots.

Yankee scouts recall: Miller Huggins laughing when Home Run Baker recommended a young former boy named Jimmy Fox, who hit the ball as far as Babe Ruth.

Tris Speaker paying not the slightest attention to Joe Medwick when Muscles worked out with the Newark Bears.

Hank Gowdy informing John McGraw that Paul Waner couldn't hit McGraw, getting his first look at Big Poison in a Pittsburgh uniform, and firing Gowdy.

McGraw, who had searched for a Jewish star for years, telling Henry Greenberg he wouldn't do.

Bill Terry advising Frank McCormick to stick to his job as shipping clerk in an antique shop.

Terry dismissing Buddy Lewis as being too slow and lacking pep.

Pie Traynor being chased out of Braves' field.

So Yankees forgers, the most efficient in the business, take no chances of missing a big leaguer.

Professor Kritcheil and the Yankee staff dispel the popular belief that there are fewer ball players today than were around 30 years ago.

"There are 10 times as many," insists Professor Kritcheil. "We got 5000 tips on players in the course of a year."

But Professor Kritcheil admits good ones are scarce.

That's why the Yankees hunt a little harder . . . check a little closer.

That's why year in and year out the Yankee organization is the most successful in the game.

Mrs. Willkie Won't Discuss Politics

She Likes Women and Women Seem to Like Her

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer

Mrs. Wendell Willkie is a woman's woman.

She likes women and women seem to like her.

And, judging from work women have done already in his behalf, she thinks they could swing Wendell Willkie's election to the presidency.

She said so at her first New York reception after her husband's nomination, but she didn't say so publicly. Mrs. Willkie makes no public statements on political subjects. She said so in quiet agreement to a question, and then turned quickly back to greet the Republican women filing by.

A Good Time

They streamed past at a tea given in a friend's home, when she was the focal point of hundreds of curious eyes. She seemed to be having a good time—and so did the women who came to see her. A quick smile and hand clasp, and then a pause and words spilling out in a friendly stream.

"Hello, my dear. How's John?" "Hello, how nice to see you—and what a pretty frock!"

I felt that, if there had been a little more time, she might have stopped to exchange a recipe.

But she talked no politics. She parried every leading question neatly and retreated with grace, determination and a smile to safer, more inconsequential ground.

Edith Willkie is a little woman, slender as a girl. Her smiling gray-blue eyes are set in a face that is wide at the cheekbones, slightly pointed at the chin and framed in short, softly curled, silver-tinged hair.

On the afternoon of the reception she wore a simple dark blue crepe frock, whose wide rippling flower corsage and topped by a neat little chapeau crowned with white violets. Something about the tilt of that hat said, "Edith Willkie likes pretty clothes." But something she said to a friend seemed to indicate that she feels clothes aren't worth too much fuss either.

"Will I get a lot of new clothes for the trip we hope to take before the campaign? I doubt if I'll have time. I'll probably just have to telephone some shop and tell the salesgirl to send up what I want in size twelve. It generally fits."

Enough Food and Sleep

Mrs. Willkie gives her time to her husband, her home, her son, Philip, who is twenty. She spends much of it, since her husband's nomination, in superintending his home schedule and seeing that he gets the right food and enough sleep. She keeps a friendly, homey atmosphere in the roomy, book-filled apartment on upper Fifth Avenue, where the Willkies live.

The Republican women who help her handle the bushel-baskets of mail that pour in these days say that if they don't watch her, she is likely to wait on those who are there to help instead of letting them wait on her. The other day, when they were having a hasty lunch, she disappeared into the kitchen and came back a few minutes later with a tray of iced orange juice, because she thought they "might like a cool drink."

But she gets time for other things. She reads a lot of economics and her friends wonder if she isn't a help to Wendell Willkie in keeping him primed on events and on reading for what he has no time. Be that as it may, they say, she has followed every step of his career. They suspect she may be one person to whom Willkie's nomination as the Republican presidential candidate came as no surprise.

Berlin Girls Are Walking on Wood

Society Wears Wooden Shoes to Preserve Leather

AP Feature Service
BERLIN — Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's snappy society strolling place, now echoes like a Dutch village on market day.

"Clop, clop clop! It's not the cavalry on parade. It's just the new shoes—wooden shoes."

Berlin's sabots are not the type they wear in Holland, but they are definitely wooden. Just listen to that girl in the apartment upstairs who insists on wearing them.

The sole is wooden and it's curved on the bottom, giving walkers something of a sailor's rolling gait. The wooden shoes are held on by a band of straw, in some cases, laced gayly in red, blue, yellow. In other instances the strap is a scrap of giddy material that the Reich wouldn't miss anyhow.

Now the secret is out. Women are wearing snappy wooden shoes simply because they don't cut into that supply of hides that's earmarked for heavier duty than strolling in Berlin soldier boys' boots, perhaps.

Allergic Visitors Should Be Polite

Don't Let a Meal Be Planned and Then Not Eat

AP Feature Service

Allergies are making life miserable for hostesses, especially for hostesses who do their own cooking. That's a thought to take along when you pack your suitcase for a visit this summer.

It's maddening to plan a delicious meal for a guest who comes to the table to say, "I'm sorry I can't eat that. My hay fever, you know. Allergic people ought to find some nice way of telling the awful truth before a meal gets to the planning stage. And if you've let yourself get diet-crazy without real excuse, it's time you backed up, anyhow."

There are other thoughtless guests who let food likes and dislikes rule them—the man who must have a favorite dish every meal, the person who won't eat any kind of mixture, no matter how good it tastes. And far too numerous are the grown-ups who have never tasted certain vegetables.

So, if you're going to be a summer visitor, remember that taking your hosts to dinner once doesn't give you a right to unreasonable food inhibitions at other meals. Nor does your status as a guest give you the privilege of being late for meals without warning your hostess. And you can make your vacation a happier time for you and your hosts by keeping in mind the fact that your vacation is most likely working time for them.

YESTERDAY, Denny and Rhoda were in the mood for a wedding. Denny was waiting for the train to arrive. Rhoda was waiting for the train to leave. Denny was waiting for the train to arrive. Rhoda was waiting for the train to leave.

CHAPTER X

Denny struggled to the rail to leap from the speeding train, but other passengers held him back.

"Don't be a fool! They'll be all right. You'd be killed!"

"Caleb—Mr. Ogden will pick them up in his car," called Mrs. King, from the rear. "Unless, of course, a coyote or a rattlesnake."

"They'll be all right," the conductor reiterated. "Shack right near the track. See it? Your run-away must have been in it or we'd have seen her. Darned lucky the young lady didn't hurt herself, jumping off my train!" Indignation emanated from him.

Carole, Denny realized, had risked her life. A fine person he was to be entrusted with the care of a child.

"I can't stand it!" Rhoda blazed. "This is the end, Wayne Dennis."

"Shut up, will you?" Denny grabbed the conductor's arm. "When do we stop? Can I get a car or—it'll be getting dark—a plane? Where are we, anyway? In Arizona?"

"There are wolves after dark!" a woman piped up. "And gila monsters. Oh, I'm going to faint!"

The conductor drew Denny away from the pack. Denny could get off at the first station. He could get a car, or, possibly, wire Winslow for a plane. Sure, there'd be time before dark. Daylight lasted in Arizona. More than most of the whole business, and would pick up Carole and Peace and bring them to the very same station, before Denny had made his arrangements. Nothing to worry about, but that train couldn't be delayed another minute. He was sorry. They were about a hundred miles from Winslow.

Mrs. King stood at Denny's elbow, wiping her eyes. "I wish I'd never given Caleb $500 for that option on his old oil well."

"Five hundred dollars, madam? So that's it!" The conductor sighed as if the limited meant the weight of the world. "Better let Mr. Dennis telegraph your bank to stop payment."

"B-b-b-but I gave him cash." "We'll do something after I find Peace," Denny told her. And this was the woman who'd put the police on his trail. And she was going to watch out for Carole. Sucker! In his misery Denny almost pined her.

In a few minutes the train slowed down at a cluster of 'dobe' shacks. Could that be a station? And a battered roadster beside it! "Good luck!" called several passengers.

"Pick you up en route, if you get a plane," the conductor said. "If we don't, wait for me in Los Angeles," Denny instructed Rhoda. "Cocoanut Grove!" It was the only place he could think of at the moment, since their previous plans had been to go on at once to La Jolla. Rhoda would have to look out for herself. His anxiety was so great he forgot to kiss her goodbye.

A worn young station agent greeted him as he hopped off. "Jumpin' bullfrogs—a passenger!" Denny had explained the predicament before the train was under way. "Can I take your car?"

"Sure, buddy. Only poor Liz put it up to him, 'if you had two girls lost in the desert and one on the limited?'"

The agent scratched his rumpled head. "Me? I'd telegraph for a plane. Car couldn't catch the train, even without a flat. Then I'd pick up the lost girls and get 'em safely aboard the train at first possible station and head for Mexico by my lonesome."

Denny heard the click of the instrument, while he watched a group of barefoot, half-naked Mexican children playing in the sand.

The station agent accepted a cigarette. "Be here before you can say Jack Robinson. Hope your folks stick to the tracks and don't try to wander off. Not much twilight here in Arizona. Old sun smears itself all over the sky and slops out of sight. Lots of time before dark, though."

The dark! Denny smothered a rising fear.

It seemed years before he heard the droning of the plane. Already the sun had splashed sunset gold across the sky. The light still held, and the afterglow would follow briefly. A little crowd gathered from nowhere to watch the plane land.

"Goodbye, buddy!" The agent waved away Denny's bill. "Good luck, and when you find 'em, take my advice and beat it to Mexico. Three girls—no harem for me." Denny climbed into the plane. "Follow the track east. There's nothing near the spot but a tumble-down shack, but it's before you get to Gallup." The pilot knew his business and every inch of the country.

Denny felt comforted, if only the sky didn't fall in. Upward they soared, over a vast expanse of sand, mountain rimmed in the distance. The plane was sailing smoothly.

"That it?" It couldn't be possible! They had only been a few minutes in the air, yet there was the ribbon of a road where the dot of a car had been, toward which Denny had seen Ogden run. Only no Carole was in sight, waving, as she should have been.

"Looks like it, only where are they?" Gone with that Texan? And if so, where? "Let's land and investigate."

THE pilot set the plane down like a baby, and the two men headed for the shack.

"Look. They've been here," Denny said. "See those tracks?" He pointed to the impressions made by small high heels and those of a child's shoe. "Peace! Carole!"

They pushed open the door and stepped into a windowless hovel, with a dirt floor covered with debris. The only sound to greet them was a loud snore, coming from a half-breed Mexican-Indian sleeping in a corner.

The pilot was outside studying the tracks again. "They came here, all right, and then they ran. See, Mr. Dennis, how much deeper these tracks are?"

"Carole! Peace! Where are you?" Denny shouted with all his might.

"Oh, Denny! Oh, Denny!" The cry came faintly to his ears. And facing it, he made out two little figures running toward him from sagebrush back of the shack.

"There they are!" Denny raced to meet them. He caught Carole in his arms, as she came panting up, dragging Peace.

"Oh, Denny! That awful man! If it hadn't been you! We were hiding behind those mesquite bushes. We heard the plane, but we had to be sure who was in it, because we were afraid he'd come back for the money. We came out as soon as we heard you call."

"Did that man molest you?" Train or no train, he'd go back and make him pay for it.

"She means Mr. Hogden!" Peace piped, delighted when the pilot picked her up and carried her. "He stole poor little Joany, the horrid old thing!"

"And that isn't all he stole," Carole said. "Wait till you hear." (To Be Continued)

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Hollywood Likes to Kick 'Em When They're Down, as Veteran Hobart Bosworth Knows

HOLLYWOOD—"One of the quaint customs of this community," said Ben Hecht, "is that when a man is down, the rest of the citizens get clubs and beat the whey out of him."

The writer, who's now taking one of his occasional flings at directing and producing, had just announced that he had engaged for a character role in the picture the Sweeney of the once-celebrated vaudeville team of Duffy and Sweeney. An excellent actor, he said, and one who could be very valuable to Hollywood. Yet, because Sweeney had had some years of obscurity and needed a job, Hollywood wouldn't give him a chance. "Maybe you remember how it was with Julius Tannen," Hecht continued. "Now there was another good actor—a big shot on Broadway and especially well liked. He came to Hollywood and spent his money and helped a lot of people who needed it. He got a few parts, but not good enough ones to show what he could do. Finally the studios didn't seem to have anything for him."

"One day his agent heard about a job at Paramount that sounded like a pretty good thing, and it was just the sort of role he could do best. Tannen rushed over there. The producer looked at him and shook his head. He said, 'I want a bald-headed man.'"

"That didn't faze Tannen, because he wears a toupee. He just reached up and took off the toupee with one painful yank. A couple of hunks of scalp came with it, but Tannen didn't mind that either."

"So the producer looked at Tannen and shook his head again. He said, 'Nope—sorry—I can't visualize you as a bald-headed man!'"

A Veteran's Reward

For sheer stupidity and ingratitude toward able players, I know of nothing to equal Hollywood's treatment of Hobart Bosworth.

About five weeks short of his 73rd birthday, a few of his friends recently helped celebrate Bosworth's 55th anniversary as an actor. On June 30, 1885, he played a walk-out bit at the California Theater in San Francisco. Two years later he played with Maude Adams, who was an ingenue then. He played in an Augustin Daly company in which John Drew was the star. After that, Bosworth became leading man for Julia Marlowe and for Mrs. Fiske.

His health broke, and he went to the desert to die. But he recovered completely and in May, 1939, appeared in the first motion picture made in California. It was "The Power of the Sultan," produced by Colonel Selig, and the studio was the drying yard of a Chinese laundry in downtown Los Angeles. He became a star as well as a director and writer, and in the early years of movies did much to stabilize and win respectability for a wildcat industry.

After that—but this needn't be an account of what Bosworth has done. The point is that he still can do a great deal, but that Hollywood won't hire him. Bosworth himself told me that casting directors seem to think of him as just an old has-been, like—

Unwritten Law

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—(P)—It's the courteous thing to do, but the law here doesn't require a motorist to stop after he hit a dog.

Marvin E. Nelson charged Oswald K. Norgaard's car killed Nelson's dog. Municipal Judge R. L. Gibbs said the "stop-at-the-scene-of-the-accident" ordinance didn't apply to dogs and suggested the case belonged in civil court.

Are You a Successophile?
Right off the bat, we ought to explain that there isn't any such word. But if a word were to be made up to describe the fellow who worships success, any kind of success, attained by any means at all, that might be it.
Right now we are in danger of developing too many people of this type. We've all heard the kind of person who looks at Europe with poyoped wonder, and mutters to himself, "Gosh! You've really got to hand it to that fellow Hitler, don't you? He sure has put it over! He must have something!"
This train of thought is very easy to fall into these days. But it is dangerous.
There is nothing in success itself that deserves worship, or even respect. The thing to ask is, "What sort of success was sought?" and, "How was it achieved?"
It is certainly true that the military accomplishments of Hitler's Germany, strictly as military accomplishments, are magnificent. A German army has been developed which no one has yet been able to resist.
Questions: How worthy an object is that? How has that served the world and its people?
Question again: How was it done? At what cost, and by what means?
The answer is simple: By channeling an unheard-of percentage of the productive ability of the German people into building a military machine. By making every man a soldier and training him for periods of time and with a thoroughness which other nations were unwilling to adopt. The other nations were reluctant to believe that men were made for this.
Suppose the United States had embarked in 1933 on a similar course. Suppose that instead of providing jobs and sustenance to an average of 2,500,000 people it had simply clapped them all into the army? Suppose that instead of building 47,000 miles of roads and 23,000 public buildings, we had built military highways and tanks and barracks? Suppose that instead of building Boulder Dam and Grand Coulee and Bonneville and Fort Peck, we had built planes and battleships?
Does anyone suppose that we could not by now have blitzkrieged Canada and Mexico and subjected the hemisphere to our will?
Of course we could. But under our democratic way, we chose other objectives.

U. S. army records show 528,274 regular army volunteers fought in the Revolutionary war and 4,057,101 in the first world war.
Perhaps we should have diverted more of our energies to military ends, less to the ways of peace. In view of what has happened since, most Americans now agree to that.
But the democratic way, even though it has devoted itself to peaceful objectives, has shown even in those a tremendous power. That power is now being diverted by world currents into military channels, channels more clearly marked by the very failure of European democracies to navigate them. Those failures were not failures of power to perform; they were failures to recognize the course. Democracy in America need fear no such failure. It will not be found wanting if the test comes.

WE THE WOMEN
Rare Is the "Clinging Vine" Who Does Not Yearn to Be a Sturdy Oak
By RUTH MILLETT
What men want women to be and what women want to be are two entirely different things.
A man thinks this is an ideal picture of a woman: A sweet little thing who is on the shy side, utterly content to spend her life smothering out her husband's life.
She is the kind of woman you would describe as sweet, rather than intelligent, and as Jim Brown's wife, rather than as an interesting woman. She can have enthusiasm. Certainly she can. But they should be the kind of a man can laugh at indulgently. They should never be anything that is real and earnest, that takes hard work and clear thinking.
She doesn't need ideas—this feminine ideal. Hasn't her husband got plenty she can borrow? And the less she talks and the more she listens, the better.
On the other hand, while pretending to be this ideal man full of and marry, women secretly want to be somebody and to do something on their own.
They crave independence, even while pretending to be honest-to-goodness clinging vines. If they didn't, wives wouldn't be so on the defensive when they get around unmarried career women.
Please, She Wants an Ego
Also
A woman doesn't enjoy spending her life building up a man's ego at the expense of her own—as any psychologist would conclude if he could listen in on a group of clinging vines at a bridge party, talking about how little men really know.
And they do want to be definite personalities themselves, not the quiet, little dependent things men insist on their being.
If you don't believe that, look at how the women's clubs flourish. The club is the one place where women can take the spotlight without feeling the disapproval of men.
The sad thing is, after forcing her into the clinging vine role until she is fifty or so, her children grown and her life empty, a man looks at her and says, "What you need are some absorbing interests. I'd be bored, too, if I just sat around gabbing with a lot of women all day."

Peach Conserve Lenox

This is a spread of many uses. It goes deliciously with hot breads, makes a fine accompaniment for roast beef, lamb or chicken, however they are cooked. Slice 3 oranges and 1 lemon very thin. (Use an extra sharp knife.) Discard the seeds. Mix orange and lemon slices with 6 pounds of peeled peaches, add 10 cups granulated sugar and 2 teaspoons cinnamon. Let stand 10 minutes to draw out the juice. Mix in 1 1/4 cups chopped seeded raisins and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Simmer until the conserve thickens—about an hour over low heat. Stir frequently with a long-handled spoon. Stir in 1 cup English walnuts pecans or shredded almonds. Cook 5 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars and seal at once.

Here is a conserve that makes a delicious dessert when served with cream cheese and crackers. It's Ginger Pear Preserve—an old-fashioned favorite with some new-fangled touches. Slice 2 lemons thin, discard the seeds. Sover the lemon with 3 inches of cold water and simmer 10 minutes. Mix 6 pounds of sliced pears with 8 cups of granulated sugar. Let stand over night, add the cooked lemon and water and one-third cup chopped ginger root. Boil quickly until the preserves thicken and become a rich amber color. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Capital Awaits Willkie Foreign Policy Statement

WASHINGTON — What Wendell Willkie may have to say about foreign policy in the near future is being awaited with intense interest by very diverse groups in Washington.

Washington originally had Willkie pegged as an interventionist, meaning that his ideas on Hitlerism and the importance of helping England were more or less in line with Roosevelt's.

His nomination hence was extremely depressing to the isolationists in congress and to the peace societies. But just recently these groups have taken new heart.

A report has reached them to the effect that Willkie would soon issue a statement on his foreign policy—a statement emphasizing the importance of keeping out of war and the dangers inherent in "stab in the back" speeches, which would definitely remove from him all traces of the interventionist label.

This report came from sources close to Willkie in New York, and—given the moment at least—was accepted by the isolationists as authentic.

Third Party Plans Discussed
It came at a moment when threats of a third ticket in the presidential race were coming from two directions.

Senator Burton Wheeler of Montana declared that there would be a new and great anti-war party if the Democrats failed to put a stiff anti-war plank in their platform. On the same day, Dr. Francis E. Townsend threatened the formation of a third party if the two major parties ignored his group's old-age pension plans.

Behind-the-scenes discussions of these possibilities took place during the Republican national convention at Philadelphia. Commonest guess was that if a third ticket materialized it would include the peace groups, the old-age pensioners and such left-wing labor strength as would follow John L. Lewis. There was enough of this talk so that a number of congressmen returned from the convention to Washington looking around anxiously for the first signs of a bolt.

Willkie Stand May Kill Threat
The makings of such a movement are at hand, but as of today the chances are that it won't take place—five to one against it, according to one senator who is allied with both the Townsend and the isolationist groups.

One trouble is that it would be very hard to cement these diverse elements together into a new party. (For one thing, Dr. Townsend himself has ideas very much like Roosevelt's on foreign policy.)

An even bigger obstacle is the matter of finances. One man who is close to the discussions that have been going on estimates that such a party would need at least one million dollars to make an effective campaign; up to date, no part of any such sum is in sight.

Nevertheless, the possibility is still there. Such men as Senator Wheeler and his associates are not going to take kindly to a campaign in which both Republican and Democratic nominees are committed to a foreign policy closely resembling F. D. R.'s. If Willkie should declare himself as the isolationists are hoping he will, the threat will fade; if he does not, you are going to hear a good deal more about it a little later.

Problems of Youth and Old Age Mirrored in Novel

When a sheltered, old-fashioned woman of 50 suddenly loses her means of support and is thrown upon a world that seemingly has no place for her, there arises a challenging problem for any writer. Not only does Amy Trent in Hilda Morris' new book, "The Vantage Point" (Putnam; $2.50), have no job for herself, but her son, Wilfred, a university graduate and engineer, drifts about from one mediocre means of support to another.

Any, however, has within her dormant resources, and it takes only a little contact with the modern dynamic world to bring them out. A remark overheard by two sophisticated women of the world cuts Amy to the quick, but it sends her immediately out to trade her shapless old-fashioned garments for modern raiment.

An up-to-date hair-do, a bit of lipstick and the resultant new courage make it possible for her to risk her meager saving in a business venture that brings happiness not only to herself but many of her relatives and friends as well. The elegant boarding house which she creates out of Cousin Joseph Avercrombie's dilapidated home spun drama of everyday human relationships.

The book, devoid of much dramatic action, is rather like a rich tapestry woven of fine threads in minute details. It draws the reader close to these different generations, different relationships and interests, all thrown together in a picturesque setting, heavy with tradition and massive uniqueness.

The social and economic problem of the man or woman too old to get work and too young for a pension, as well as that of the new generation, trained but with no jobs to be had, is touched upon but not solved in this book. Everyone caught in the throes of an unkind world does not have the courage that was Amy's.

Not Bright to Sit All Day in the Sun

Beauty Experts and Doctors Advise Against It

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

It really isn't smart to sun-tan to excess.

Not only do the doctors say that, but the beauty experts too, this year. Too much tan is out.

It's possible for anyone to get too much of the sun's rays, of course, and there are thin-skinned beauties and red-haired lovelies who simply cannot take sunlight.

"It's a case of some folk being allergic to sunshine," says Ann Delafield, a New York beauty director. She thinks sun has caused more damage to American beauty than anything else in recent years.

"No woman over 25 should sun tan from the neck up," is Miss Delafield's admonition. That's because sun dries the skin, resulting in wrinkles. She adds that any woman who is more than 40 who sun-tans her body is adding three years to her looks.

If you still want tan, it's well to sun only about five minutes on your back and five minutes in front each day. The rest of the day stay out of the direct sunlight. Wear a large sun-hat, carry a gay parasol or wear a good-looking beach robe.

Summer is a grand time to even the color of your hair. You can wrap the ends, that bleach more quickly, in a kerchief, leaving the oily top exposed. The result will be hair all one color when fall comes.

In case you've been going light on exercise all winter, don't try to combine your exercise and sun. And be as moderate in exercise as you are in sunning.

When you're in the sun, bath yourself with a good lotion, one of the new ones that serves both as lotion and powder base, or use a good cream. You can even take vinegar or strong tea from the kitchen to protect your skin and get a light even tan.

The Good Earth—Once

Food experts paint a tragic picture of Europe starving next winter in the worst famine since the Middle Ages. Farm boys are at the front—or on casualty lists—and all too few will be harvest scenes like this next autumn. For war is in the saddle over Europe and the three other dread Horsemen—Pestilence, Death and Famine—are championing at their bits.

Naturally curly hair is oval, growing more on one side than another, and hence curling as it grows. Straight hair, on the other hand, is cylindrical, like a rubber tube.

of a good microscope, (a doctor's old scope could be used) and further equipment.

There is a great movement of people to and from Japan. The Koreans are going to Japan to fill positions in the labor fields left by the soldiers, and the Japanese are pouring over to North China to open work. I was told that some 8,000 cross the Straits daily, with five ships each way every day. The trains are filled and I slept with my legs out in the aisles of the ships second class, due to the jam.

Just as I left I heard that the order had gone out that all Koreans have to take Japanese names, even though their family trees went back for 2,000 years.

The little churches, large ones too, are running along pretty well, and many are very faithful to the Word. Most of the missionaries have withdrawn from the Presbyteries, due to the forced shrine attendance.

About 15 years ago I treated a boy with leg ulcers, and kept him in the hospital a year or so. He started a flourishing church in his district, and now brings me eggs, chickens, and gifts annually. He stood up in a revival once to give his testimony, and made this statement, as reported to me by Mr. Crane, "President Wilson felt he call to preach the Gospel so strongly, that he gave up the presidency of the U. S. to come out here to run a hospital." I suppose he told this as a sort of joke, but one day he asked me seriously if I had not run for the presidency of the U. S. A. a few times. I said, "No, that was Mr. Bryan."

Drouth in Korea

Last year Korea suffered in many sections from drouth, and word from Korea last week says still no rain. This makes a serious condition if a second drouth follows that of last year. Our 80 families of lepers who depend upon their crops made only half rice crop last year, and this spring about a 50 per cent barley crop. This added much extra to our budget. I have marveled how good the Lord has been to that heathen land these past 32 years of my stay in sending such fine rains apparently just when needed. During a drouth they dig up the bones of the women who have had a poor burial in the valleys, and bury them in the hills to appease the spirits.

Today there are over a half million Christians to pray for. Japan has gotten herself into a terrible jam by the war in China, and many of the people are now discontented that there is no end in sight; and the tax burdens are very great. There is inflation of currency and abundance of cheap money, but due to the low gold supply we are cut off from foreign goods from U. S. A. and such things as nails, wire, sugar, aspirin, cotton, cloth, coffee and groceries, and many other necessities cannot be had. A friend told me that it required four police permits for him to purchase four pounds of nails.

Changes in Time

Here are some nuts to crack: Coming over on the ship we set forward our watches 30 minutes each day, but still we had two Mondays, two May 10ths. Going back in July we will skip a day. We are 17 hours ahead of California. We get the broadcast from Treasure Island, San Francisco, at 4:30 a. m., but receive it in Korea at 9:30 that night, or 9:30 p. m. of the same day. A baby was born over there and a cablegram was sent to the grandparents over here, and the cable gram was received over here the day before the baby was born.

ing his colleagues to vote for confirmation of the nominee. "I ought to, I live in Illinois. But he has placed his country and his patriotism above partisanship. He stands now in the eyes of many as a man without a party, but he is a man who will stand when party labels have been long forgotten."

Senator Wiley (Rep., Wis.), supporting the nomination, said he believed President Roosevelt was trying conscientiously to get non-Democrats to undertake jobs "which they may be better equipped to do than men of his own political faith." Wiley said he did not think Knox was so much of an "interventionist" as he was a "pre-parallelist."

Caraway and Miller voted for confirmation.

Some of the British planes dived through the ring of Messerschmitts to reach the bombers. One British pilot was credited with roaring high over the ringed bombers then diving into the center and bringing down one fighter and a bomber.

Some of the planes smashed together in mid-air.

Countering the German drive, which was believed here to have the full support of Italy and possibly also of Japan, United States diplomats were said to have stepped up their own efforts to convince Latin-American countries their future security depended on full co-operation in this hemisphere.

President Roosevelt, giving weight to assurances of United States support, said in his defense message to congress "we will repel aggression against the United States or the Western Hemisphere."

Value of Milk

Milk, as most mothers know, is the most important item in the diet of young children since they will not develop normally without it.

Providing a sufficient daily milk supply for the baby or small child is a problem for some mothers, however, particularly since the small infant cannot digest raw cow's milk readily as it forms large tough curds in the baby's stomach. Cow's milk also has a high buffer value (alkalinity) which neutralizes the gastric juice and prevents the digestion of curd in the stomach.

Hence for the infant, advised Miss Gertrude E. Conant, University of Arkansas college of Agriculture, the milk must be boiled to form finer curds, and acidified with lactic acid or lemon juice to make it less alkaline.

Some children are allergic to cow's milk, but may digest goat's milk very readily. The Extension nutritionist says. Goat's milk has a softer curd, and is more easily digested by the small child. There is a further advantage in that the goat is much less susceptible to disease than the cow, and there is not the same danger of contracting tuberculosis and undulant fever. When cow's milk is boiled or pasteurized, there is no danger of contracting these diseases, however.

The flavor of milk is easily affected by the cow's feed and also by strong flavors with which it may come in contact, consequently, care must be taken or the children will refuse to drink it. If the child objects to the milk flavor, the extension nutritionist suggests that fruit juice, syrup from canned fruit or chocolate syrup be used to disguise the flavor.

To increase consumption of milk, Miss Conant suggests that it be used instead of water to cook the breakfast cereal, since cooking cereal in milk increases the food value and also adds a pleasing flavor to the cereal.

Green Turtles Are Heavy

The green turtle reaches a weight of 700 pounds, but usually is caught in sizes of less than 100 pounds. Trips which it makes on shore to lay its eggs frequently have fatal endings.

A straight line was thought to be the shortest distance between two points, but if you go straight from San Francisco to Japan it is 5,000 miles, and if you make a big curve away around north and then down again it is 4,000 miles, or just a thousand miles nearer by going around. How about your rule in geometry?

I think that the Premier of Japan and most of her people are very anxious for peace and trade with the U. S. A. but newspaper talk and a few are trying to stir up trouble with the U. S. A. We see how wicked war is so let's pray for peace in the Orient at least, Japan and the U. S. A. need each other in their trade relations. We laugh and say we have made a substitute for silk but Japan also has made a substitute for our cotton. Let's "do unto others."

Many of the missionaries are marking time and praying for peace and for the opening of doors again. It is a severe mental strain for all of us. Facing such terrible world conditions as we do now it behooves every Christian to be ever in prayer for God's mercy upon this sin-sick world and the saving of our remnant of Christian civilization. I also ask for your prayers for our mission work that the doors again may be opened. Be in prayer for Japan and China.

Yours in His service,
R. M. Wilson

Fighter Joins U. S. Air Corps

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Elevé Wilkerson was good enough as a fighter to win a national intercollegiate title for the University of Mississippi.

In the last two years he has fought professionally.

Now Elevé has put away his gloves to join the U. S. Army air corps, where he figures "my fighting might do some good if it's needed."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Kidney Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
